IN FOREIGN LANDS.

Correspondence of the Intelligencer. The fame of the Swiss Alps is so great that the word Switzerland has become almost a synonym for grand, majestic and beautiful mountain scenery; and yet we must remember that all of Switzerland is not devoted to snow-capped mountains and seas of ice, but that the Northern portion of the country, comprising a large share of its territorial extent, has no high mountains, but is occupied by broad plains, low hills and fertile valleys, with thriving cities and villages and densely populated rural districts. The government is Republican in form, the twenty-two cantons, with a population of about three millions, being united under a constitution. Although we frequently hear of the "President of the Swiss Republic," there is really no such office or officer in existence; no chief executive being elected by the people, but the so called "President" being simply chosen by the legislative body to preside over its deliberations. On a war footing, its army, in spite of the small population, numbers over 200,000 men, while Swiss soldiers have for centuries been found in the armies of almost every nation in Europe, they being among the few faithful mercenaries known to history.

Zurich, where we left our readers in our last letter, is one of the most flourishing of the Swiss cities, its manufactures of silk and cotton being especially important. The lake at the foot of which and from the city many beautiful views may be obtained, while from the Uetliberg, 1,565 feet above the lake and about five miles from the city, a more extended proposed in gained.

extended prospect is gained.

Leaving Zurich, we pass the little lake Zug, only nine miles in length by three in breadth, and shortly after reach Lucerne, a walled town, situated at the Western extremity of lake Lucerne, whose outlet, the Reuss river, a clear,
dark stream, flows through the city.
Two of the four bridges which span the river are very old and quaint, the roof of the one nearest the lake being decorated the one nearest the lake being decorated with more than 150 pictures, illustrating the lives of the patron saints of the place, while the other is ornamented in the same manner with the "Dance of Death;" representing the grim messenger as present in every employment and pleasure of life. The great attraction of the town, however, is the "Lion of Lucerne." This monument, which represents a lion pietced by a spear and dying with its paw upon the Bourbon shield, was designed by Thorwaldsen, in memory of nearly 800 officers and men of the Swiss guard, who fell in defending the Tuilcries at Paris in 1792 and is cut into the at Paris, in 1792, and is cut into the solid rock of the mountain a short distanco from the lake. It is one of the grandest and most impressive works of the kind which ever came from the chisel the fidelity and courage of the Swiss sol-

the charming lakes of Switzerland.
Deeply set among the green slopes of the mountains, with their snowy peaks rising high in the distance, dotted here and there with cultivated patches and picturthere with cultivated patches and picturesque chalets, it is a gem of indescribable loveliness. It has noislands of importance, but this deficiency is more than compensated for by the extreme irregularity of its shore line, its arms reaching out and clasping the bases of the mountains in every direction. From Lucerne, at the Western extremity, is a most delightful sail of about three hours. Many points on the lake, as well as throughout this entire region, are associated with that here of Swiss legend, William Tell; and although the modern historian may proare dear to every Swiss heart and are cherished with a tenderness and pride which speaks volumes for their love of country. We pass a massive rock rising from the lake, bearing an inscription in honor of "Frederick Schiller, the Bard of Tell." A little farther on a small chapel marks the spot where Tell is said to have leaped from Gessler's boat. Two miles from Fluelen is Altorf, where Tell performed histerrible feat of archery, statues of himself and son marking the supposed location of the fearful test. Returning from Fluelen, we land at Vitznau, at the foot of the Rigi, and take the railway to the summit.

The Rigi is not a single peak, but is an irregular shaped mountain whose base is washed on three sides by the waters of take Lucerne. Although a mere dwarf, compared with some of the giants of the compared with some of the giants of the Alps, (its height being only about 6,000 feets) its location is such as to give from its summit what is probably the finest view in Switzerland. On ascending the mountain, we found, although it was late in June, a snow storm in progress at the top, with about four inches of snow already fallen, and the fog so thick as to render it impossible to see more than a dozen yards in any direction. In fact, the Rigi is celebrated almost as much for its fogs as for the view obtained in good weather, and many are the disappointed tourists who make the ascent and return in despair. One of the unlucky ones, in despair. One of the unlucky ones, years ago, left on the visitors' book the following bit of inspiration:

"Whosver saw the sun on Rigi set?

"Whosver saw the sun on Rigi set?

"Whosver saw it rise?"

The man that says he saw them both,
Upon my soul, he lies.

Three misty days and miserable nights,
Upon this mountain we passed,
Nor saw the sun, nor moon, nor stars;
But misty misery." The lies.

We hoped for better days, however, and after twenty-four hours of not patient, but wery impatient waiting, the clouds lifted, the dists soled away and we were rewarded by seeing one of the mest magnificent panoramas ever spread out to the eye of man. On the North, just at the foot of the mountain, lies lake Zug, bordered by low hills, with a broad plain beyond stretching away toward the the eyo of man. On the North, just at the foot of the mountain, lies lake Zug, bordered by low, hills, with a broad plain beyond stretching away toward the Black Forest in the distance. Eastern the low peaks of the Right are seen, with an occasional glimpse of lake Lowrez and Lucerne, with a background of forest, mountain and valley. Farther South and the part of the "Forest Sea" is visible, with the precipitous peaks of the Bernsse Alps, the pycyless Jungfran, the mighty First seamners, the Watterhord and may of lesser note, helding high their mantles of dazzling white, may another portion of the lake appears in the West, and just South of the city riss the stain ordered back of the stain of the lake appears in the West, and just South of the city riss the stain ordered back of the stain of the lake of the stain of the lake appears in the West, and just South of the city riss the stain ordered back of the stain of the late Junear angs, and where were the sea target and as the Junear angs, and where were the sea target the Junear angs, and where were the sea target with the place of the mountain, plain, forest sind validy, with filtreen lakes are septimed within the past three o'clock the next morning, the doubtful melody of an Appine horn was heart through the lake of the kine, a warning to the alcegon that now was the time and this filter the place to see an Alpine annies. In a few moment the guests a muley throng ware assembled on at a Lighest point of the fore, a warning to the alcegon that now was the time and this butch. The mountain, a few roads from the alcego on that now was the time and this bott. The mountain, a few roads from the sector of the mountain, a few roads from the sector of the place of the sea of the stain have faded and far away to the Northeast, over the mountains of St. Gall come "the streaks of the morning light." Now a from ambush and killed Alice Higgs, 16 beam kissec the silvered top of the mountain far to the South. Another and another icy crest is lighted up, the golden wagon with her family. The girl had orb begins to appear above the horizon, the rays descend to the valleys below and on the memory of all is stamped, never to be effaced, the beautiful picture of a sunrise on the Rigi.

We descend the railway, which, by the way, is a cog wheel affair, similar to the Mount Washington line, having in some places a grade of one in four, and at Vitznau again take the steamer for Alpnach, where carriages are in waiting for the journey over the Brunig Pass to Brienz. The road over the Brunig is a marvel of engineering skill and many times the rocks seem to effectually bar all stantly changing views as we ascend and descend the pass. Lake Brienz is at last reached and we transfer once more to a steamer, and cross the lake to Giessbach, where we sten see the where we stop a few hours to see the waterfall of the same name. The little stream which forms the Giessbach Falls, makes a total descent of nearly 1,200 feet to the lake; but the "fall" is simply a series of cascades, varying in height from ten to one hundred feet. At night the principal cascades are illuminated with different colored Bengal lights, and the "illumination of the Giessbach" is the principal attraction of the mammoth hotel located there. Our opinion of Swiss waterfalls was not improving, however, and we took the next boat for the foot of the lake, from which a ride of ten minutes by rail brought us to Interlaken. As the name implies, Interlaken is between the lakes of Brienz and Thun;

and as it is not only a delightful spot itself, but also a convenient rendezvous for excursions into the Bernese Oberland, it is a very popular place for tourists.

About twelve miles distant and easily reached by carriage, is Grindelwald, near which place are the Grindelwald glaciers, flowing down from the Bernese Alps. We visited the "upper glacier" and were much interested in it. The vast frezen flood, crowded down the gorge in the mountain by the immense weight of ice and snow above, crumbles weight of ice and snow above, crumbles and meits as it reaches the valley and drops its burden of rocks and other debris into the terminal "moraine." From the base flows a small stream, almost as white as milk, which, after winding about among the mountains, finally reaches lake Brienz. At one point a grotto has been cut directly into the face of the glacier, and one may enter for nearly 200 feet this wast ice house of nature. The ice, which, in small fragnature. The ice, which, in small frag-ments appears as clear as crystal, here, owing to its great thickness, is a most lovely blue and the light transmitted through it throws a ghastly pallor which is almost alarming over the faces of visit-ors. On either side of the glacier, facing outward, rises a mighty wall of rock, thousands of feet in height, reminding one of the lofty cliffs of Yosemite; but on the other side of the valley the moun-tain slopes gently back, covered with small farms and dotted with hundreds of cottages. On our return from Grindelcottages. On our return from Grindelof the sculptor; and as a memorial to the fidelity and courage of the Swiss solthe fidelity and courage of the Swiss soldier in foreign lands, as well as for its artistic merits, it is justly pointed to with pride by the citizens of the city.

Lake Lucerne, or the "Lake of the Four Forest Cantons," as it is sometimes called, is by far the most beautiful of all the charming lakes of Switzerland. strict orders to throw it all over at once. Twenty miles South of Berne is Fribourg, with another celebrated organ, and forty miles farther on we reach Lausanne, where, at the Hotel Gibbion, in the garden of which the great historian wrote his Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, we stop to rearrange the outline of our Italian tour.

Van Winkle King Cotton Press

Has long been before the public, and is too well known to need any further description. Its chief points of merits are: It takes very little room, is easily handled, and takes so little power; can be used on all kinds of powers—horse, water or steam. Ginning and packing can all go on at the same time, without interfering with the Gin. A two-inch belt will pack a 500 lb. bale of cetton. It saves its cost the first season in labor.

Read the following Testimonial:

Andresson, S. C.—Mr. John E., Peoples.—Sir: The Steam Fower Van Winkle: Cotton Press bought from you last Fall has given entire satisfaction. I packed bales of cotton weighing 660 to 725 lbs. in five minutes with all ease, using a 4-inch belt and 25 lbs. steam. There did not seem any more strain on the Press than with a 450 lb. bale. For durability, strength, lightness of power, small quantity of steam required, economy of space, I deem it the King of all Cotton Presses; especially so as the low price at which it can be bought for puts it within reach of every man running a steam Gin. In fact I would not be without it for twice its cost. I would not be without it for twice its cost. I would not be without it for twice its cost. A FEW WORDS FROM CAPT. R. W. BONN A WELL-KNOWN CITIZEN OF MACON

In the blood is apt to snow itself Spring, and nature should by all man assisted in throwing it off. Swift's go does this effectively. It is a purely the company of the spring of the s assisted in throwing it off. Swift's poles this effectively. It is a purely it does this effectively. It is a purely it does this effectively. It is a purely it does this effectively. It is a purely it ble, non-poisonous remody, which is nature to 'ce all the poison or the through the pores of the skin.

Mr. Robert A. Easley, of Dickson, is writes, under date March 10, 1884; i'chills and fever, followed by rhours for three years, so that I was not ablated the tend to my business; had tried almoss kind of medicine, and found no related the recommended Swift's Specific tried one bottle and my bealth bearing rove. I continued until I had to six bottles, and it has set me on my fan sound and well as ever. I recomment to all similarly afflicted."

Letters from twenty-three of the lease that it druggists of Atlanta say, under of March 24, 1884; "We sell more of Specific than any other one remedy, three to ten times as much as any ablood medicine. We sell it to all deand many of the best families used and many of the best families used iffe. I was terribly poiso and with max and was given up to die. Swift's Specific stellieved me promptly and entirely. It is the greatest remedy of the age.

Sup't Cas Works, Roma in I have known and used Swift's for more than twenty years, and has more than twenty years, and has more wooderful results from its use from any remedy in or out of the Parcopicia. It is a certain and safe anklated.
